

Freedom Of Choice Act (FOCA)

Following the Supreme Court's closely divided decision to uphold the first-ever federal ban on abortion, it is clear that the stakes have changed and the right to choose is facing a new level of assault. That's why the pro-choice community is working to guarantee the right to choose through the Freedom of Choice Act (FOCA) – a measure that will codify Roe v. Wade's protections and guarantee the right to choose for future generations of women.

- Recognizing that a woman's right to choose is being chipped away both by the courts and state lawmakers, the pro-choice community – with the help of pro-choice leaders in Congress like Sen. Barbara Boxer (D-CA) and Rep. Jerry Nadler (D-NY) – is working to enact a federal law that would restore the right to choose as expressed in 1973 in Roe v. Wade and Doe v. Bolton.
- Since Roe v. Wade was decided, a woman's right to choose has been systematically eroded by anti-choice legislators in states around the country. In fact, more than 500 anti-choice measures have been enacted in the states since 1995, essentially rolling back this fundamental right for many women.
- With a woman's right to choose already in a precarious state, President Bush's appointment of John Roberts and Samuel Alito to the Supreme Court further threatens the constitutional protection for reproductive rights – a threat immediately made evident in the Court's ruling in Gonzales v. Carhart and Gonzales v. Planned Parenthood Federation of America.
- In the Carhart decision, the newly reconfigured Court – with Bush's appointees Roberts and Alito casting decisive votes – upheld the first-ever federal ban on a safe abortion method – with criminal penalties for doctors. More troubling, the decision effectively reversed Supreme Court precedent and rolled back key protections that were guaranteed by Roe v. Wade, including the long-standing exception safeguarding women's health.
- Dissenting in Carhart, Justice Ginsburg called the majority's opinion "alarming," and stated that "[f]or the first time since Roe, the Court blesses a prohibition with no exception safeguarding a woman's health." Further, she said, the federal ban "and the Court's defense of it cannot be understood as anything other than an effort to chip away at a right declared again and again by this Court."
- By enacting FOCA, we will establish a federal law guaranteeing reproductive freedom for future generations of American women. This guarantee will protect women's rights even if President Bush and an anti-choice Congress are successful in reversing Roe v. Wade or enacting even more restrictions on our right to choose.
